Dear [REDACTED]

Emergent is a global biosciences company dedicated to protecting and enhancing life by providing specialized medical products that address accidental, intentional, and naturally occurring threats to public health. We develop, manufacture, and deliver medical countermeasures against public health threats through a pipeline of innovative vaccines and therapeutics worldwide. To safeguard against biological threats and emerging infectious diseases, Emergent has collaborated with the US and international governments for more than 25 years to support their preparedness strategies.

As part of our commitment to protect against CBRN and other public health threats, Emergent partners [REDACTED]

In view of your function as Member of Parliament responsible for health care and defense, we would like to arrange an exchange focusing on countering current and future health and security threats and the stockpiling pipeline in Germany, particularly in light of the upcoming Healthcare Security Law (Gesundheitssicherstellungsgesetz). Future threats will become increasingly unforeseen and unexpected – a circumstance already mirrored by the threat Russia is posing to Germany and its allies. Therefore, strategic and long-term planning for preparedness, especially for low-probability and high-impact threats like CBRN and their countermeasures, is highly essential.

We are keen to hear your perspective on civil protection and disaster control. [REDACTED]

Yours sincerely,
